

Heart Gallery.....

Orange County California Chapter

The history of Heart Gallery

On March 29, 2001, the New Mexico Children, Youth and Families Department (CYFD) brought the expression “ a picture is worth a thousand words” to life. On that day, the first annual “Heart Gallery” exhibit opened at the prestigious Gerald Peters Gallery in Santa Fe. An unprecedented crowd of 1,200 people gathered at the opening to see stirring, professional portraits of children in CYFD custody that needed permanent homes. At the opening, and as they toured around the state, the Heart Gallery portraits have inspired heightened interest in foster and adoption, and drawn national attention. Like many great ideas it can be traced to a single dedicated individual–Diane Granito, an adoption recruiter for the State of New Mexico.

The start of the Heart Gallery Orange County California Chapter

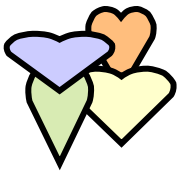

In response to the article highlighting Heart Gallery in the Sunday, January 2, 2005 issue of Parade magazine, a group of 17 dedicated volunteers, from all walks of life, came together on January 29, 2005 to inaugurate a Heart Gallery Chapter in Orange County, California. The very first responder to that article was 12 year old Sophie Riemer, who along with help from her mother Danette, chose to be instrumental in establishing the local chapter as her mitzvah project as she readies for her Bat Mitzvah this year. The group has already aligned themselves to work closely with the Orange County Social Services Agency (OCSSA), Children and Family Services.

About the Children in the care of OCSSA, Children and Family Services

OCSSA Children and Family Services staff strives to prevent and remedy conditions that involve abuse, neglect or exploitation of children in our diverse and rapidly changing community. An average of 3,000 children are in out-of-home care, receiving family reunification or permanent placement. Approximately 38% reside with relatives, 37% in licensed or certified foster homes and 17% in group homes such as Orangewood, with the remainder in emergency shelters and other types of placements. Foster and adoptive homes are urgently needed to provide a safe nurturing environment for a variety of children from diverse cultural and ethnic backgrounds. Families able to care for sibling sets and older children are in great demand.
